Washington Defeated Yesterday in a Pretty Six-Inning

Game. TWIRLERS DID GOOD WORK

Three Tried by the 'Varsity-A Fast Double Beat the

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., March 21.—
The weather cleared up this afternoon in time for Washington and Virginia to get in a six-inning game before dark. Two errors in succession by Nill in the third inning enabled the collegians to taily four runs, which proved enough to win, the final score being 4 to 1.

Despite the muddy condition of the diamond, the contest was a fairly clean one, and full of interest from start to finish. Coach Nalle tried out three of his twirlers, Cole. Adams and Moses. Cole, who officiated for two innings, did not allow a hit. Adams, who succeeded him, proved equally as effective, having a total of five strike outs in three innings. In the third, he fanned Jones, Cassaday and Captáin Stahl in succession. With Mullin and Nill on second and third in the next inning, he struck out Knoll.

The Senators looked to be sure winners in the sixth, but a fast double spoiled their chances. With the bases full, Townsend hit a long fly to right-field, Daniel gathered it in after a run and shot it to Chandler in time to catch Mullin at the home plate.

Adams and Pollard reached first at the opening of the third on two successive errors by Nill. In the first instance, he allowed a grounder to get away from him and in the second, he became ratited and instead of throwing to either first or second, held the ball in his hunds. Cracraft struck out, and Daniel walked: Knoll threw to Mullin, who is turn threw to Nill to catch Adams, who was playing off the bag. Nill allowed the ball to get threw to Mullin, who is turn threw to Mill to catch Adams, who was playing off the bag. Nill allowed the ball to get through his leas, and both Adams and Poilard counted. Daniel scored on Rowe's two-base bit, and Rowe himself went home on Graham's single. Washington scored in the sixih; Jones and Graham both slipped up in the mud in attempts to throw to first, and Cassaday and Mullin were safe. Cassaday came home from second on Bill's single.
